10 Questions TO ASK WHEN CHOOSING A Summer Camp

1. What's the camp's philosophy?

Is it one you're comfortable with as a parent? Is it a good match for your child's temperament? Is competition or cooperation emphasized? If it's a camp run by a religious organization, what religious observances or practices are part of the program?

2. How does the camp recruit, screen and train its staff?

Do counselors have criminal background checks? First aid training?

3. What about return rates?

How many counselors are returning this year? The ACA says at most camps, 40-60 percent of the staff returns. If the number you're given is lower, ask why. How many campers return? Fifty percent is good, and more is better.

4. What's the ratio of counselors to campers?

ACA guidelines for overnight camps call for a 1:6 ratio for ages 7 and 8, 1:8 for ages 9-14; and 1:10 for ages 15-18. Day camp guidelines call for 1:8 for children ages 6-8; 1:10 for children ages 9-14; and 1:12 for ages 15-18.

5. How old are the counselors?

The ACA recommends that 80 percent of the staff be 18 or older and that all staffers be at least 16 and a minimum of two years older than the campers they supervise.

6. What medical staff work at the camp and what backup facilities are nearby?

While most states have regulations for camps, there is no federal oversight of camps' health and safety. The ACA recommends that an overnight camp have a licensed physician or registered nurse on the site every day, and that day camps should have direct phone access. If your child takes medication, has food allergies or a chronic medical condition, be sure you are comfortable that the camp will be able to handle your child's needs.

7. What is the camp's approach to discipline and how does the camp handle conflicts between campers?

Find out what the camp's rules are and what breaches would result in a camper being sent home. You should be comfortable that the camp's practices are in line with your parenting practices.

8. What does a typical daily schedule look like?

This will help you decide if your child will be happy with the level of physical activity or the amount of time devoted to arts and crafts. Ask how much freedom a child has to choose activities.

9. Will the camp be transporting the children?

What vehicles are used and how often are they inspected? Who drives them and what training do drivers have?

10. Ask for references.

Finally and most important, get the names of parents with children the same age who have attended the camp.

Top 10 CAMP Essentials

Suntan Lotion:

Not only are sunburns painful, but too much exposure to sunlight can increase the risk of skin cancer. A sunscreen of SPF 15 or higher can make spending summer days outside a safer proposition.

Bug Spray:

Camps can be havens for mosquitoes, bees, and other pests. Bug spray can make a big difference, but you'd be surprised how easy it is to forget that.

Bathing Suit:

Here's another item that ought to be a no-brainer, but it can be left out in the shuffle of packing. Swimming and water activities are a big part of many summer camp experiences. Also pack Aquasox or flip-flops for kids, to protect their feet in and around the waterhole.

Disposable Camera:

You wouldn't want to risk sending your child to camp with an expensive and fragile digital camera. A cheap disposable is a great way to ensure that summer camp memories can last a lifetime.

Flashlight:

While many camps provide flashlights for nighttime activities, it's a good idea for your child to take along his own flashlight, along with fresh batteries. You never know when one might come in handy.

Toothbrush:

You can't guarantee that your child will remember to brush at camp, but don't let it be for lack of trying on your part. Consider buying an electric toothbrush -- the novelty may appeal to your child.

Sun Hat:

During sports and other outdoor activities, wearing a hat is a great way to keep the glare out of young eyes. Sun hats can also be stylish, and useful for simply lounging around.

Water Bottle:

A durable water bottle can be crucial for hikes and other long daytime activities. Keeping kids hydrated during the hot summer months is important for their overall health.

Raincoat or Poncho:

The ideal camp session would feature only sunny days, but Mother Nature has a funny sense of humor sometimes. Wet weather gear is a must.

Personal Notebook or Journal:

Encourage your child to keep a journal of her camp experiences. She may not realize it now, but later in life those memories will be meaningful.
